Understanding the Author Rights Pilot
/Library and Information Science and Archives and Heritage journals/

Publishing licenses and rights for authors

To publish an article in the Library and Information Science or Archives and Heritage journals, Taylor & Francis invites authors to grant to us a license to publish the final, definitive, and citable Version of Scholarly Record. This clear and unambiguous record of the scholarly or scientific process is the final version of an article which has been edited, peer-reviewed, and accepted in a journal.

As your publisher, we commit:

- To defend your article against plagiarism and copyright infringement, and to take all reasonable steps to act against the unauthorized replication of an article in part or in whole.
- To receive and administer permissions, and deal with licensing issues relating to an article.
- To maintain the integrity of an article such that it becomes "the sworn statement of science" (a definitive, citable, permanent, and secure record of an article, accessible in perpetuity).
- To ensure the safe archiving of an article, and, as needed, to ensure that a copy is deposited in any national archive deriving from legislation such as the Library of Congress Mandatory Deposit and the Legal Deposit Libraries Act 2003.
- To supply definitive information on how to cite your article in both print and online formats.

Your rights as author and copyright-holder

In granting us a license to publish, you maintain:

- The right to be identified as the author of an article whenever and wherever the article is published.
- Patent rights, trademark rights, or rights to any process, product, or procedure described in an article.
- The right to share, at any time, on a non-commercial basis with colleagues in print or digital format your "Author Manuscript" (the unpublished version of the article created by you prior to peer review, often called a "preprint").
- The right to post, at any time, on a non-commercial basis, your "Author's Original Manuscript" as a digital file on your own website for personal or professional use, or on your institution's network or intranet or website, or in a subject repository that does not offer content for commercial sale or for any systematic external distribution by a third party with this acknowledgment:

  "This is an Author's Original Manuscript of an Article submitted to the {JOURNAL TITLE} available online at http://www.tandfonline.com/"

- The right to retain, at any time, on a non-commercial basis the AM version of the article as specified above, after publication of the Version of Scholarly Record in the journal with this acknowledgment:
"This is an Author's Original Manuscript of an Article whose final and definitive form, the Version of Record, has been published in the {JOURNAL TITLE} {date of publication}, available online at: http://www.tandfonline.com/{Article DOI}.

- The right to post at any time after the publication of the Version of Scholarly Record, without embargo, on a non-commercial basis, your "Accepted Manuscript" (i.e., your manuscript in the form accepted for publication, revised after peer review; a "postprint"), as a digital file on your own website for personal or professional use, or on your institution's network or intranet or website, or in a subject repository that does not offer content for commercial sale or for any systematic external distribution by a third party, provided that you do not use the PDF version of the Article prepared by us and that you include any amendments or deletions or warnings relating to the Article issued or published by us; and with this acknowledgment:

  "This is an Accepted Manuscript of an Article published in {JOURNAL TITLE} {date of publication}, available online at: http://www.tandfonline.com/{Article DOI}.

- Following publication, as required, Taylor & Francis will deposit the final version of your manuscript to any designated institutional repository including PubMedCentral (PMC) with which Taylor & Francis has a Deposit or Publication Framework Agreement, to facilitate public access without embargo. The final version is defined as the version of the Article which that was accepted for publication, reflecting any author-agreed changes made in response to peer review and proof correction. The version of your article posted to the institutional or subject repositories, including PMC, will be shown as being in your copyright and protected by this license.

- The right to share with colleagues (but not on a commercial or systematic basis) copies of an article in its published form as supplied by Taylor & Francis as an electronic or printed offprint or reprint.

- The right to make printed copies of all or part of an article for use by you for lecture or classroom purposes provided that such copies are not offered for sale or distributed in any systematic way, and provided that acknowledgment to prior publication in the relevant Taylor & Francis journal is made explicit.

- The right to facilitate the distribution of the article if the article has been produced within the scope of an author’s employment, so that the author's employer may use all or part of the article internally within the institution or company provided that acknowledgment to prior publication in the relevant Taylor & Francis journal is made explicit.

- The right to include the article in a thesis or dissertation that is not to be published commercially, provided that acknowledgment to prior publication in the relevant Taylor & Francis journal is made explicit.

- The right to present the article at a meeting or conference and to distribute printed copies of the article to the delegates attending the meeting provided that this is not for commercial purposes and provided that acknowledgment to publication of the Version of Scholarly Record in the relevant Taylor & Francis journal is made explicit.

- The right to use the article in its published form in whole or in part without revision or modification in personal compilations [in print or electronic form] or other publications of an author’s own articles, provided that acknowledgment to publication of the Version of Scholarly Record in the relevant Taylor & Francis journal is made explicit.

- The right to expand the article into book-length form for publication, provided that acknowledgment to prior publication in the relevant Taylor & Francis journal is made explicit. Where permission is sought to re-use an article in a book chapter or edited collection on a commercial basis a fee will be due, payable by the publisher of the new work. Where you as the author of the article have had the lead role in the new work (i.e., you are the sole author of the new book or editor of the edited collection) fees will be waived. Acknowledgment to prior publication in the journal should be made explicit:

Acknowledgment: This {chapter or book} is derived in part from an article published in the {JOURNAL TITLE} {date of publication} {copyright Taylor & Francis/Society}, available online at: http://www.tandfonline.com/{Article DOI}

Please note that any of the following exclusions will require you to obtain written permission from Taylor & Francis:

- Inclusion of an article in a course pack for onward sale by a third party.
- Distribution in print or electronic form by any third party that will subsequently distribute it systematically (as described above).
- Distribution in print or electronic form to the commercial benefit of any third party.

Retrospective coverage
We are happy to extend all these provisions to the many thousands of authors who have signed copyright assignments and licenses to publish in the past with Taylor & Francis or one of its constituent imprints, without the need to seek amendment to the previous agreements.

Definition of terms

"First publication" is taken to mean "first" publication in a recognized Taylor & Francis journal or a journal published by Taylor & Francis on behalf of a scholarly or professional association, in electronic and/or print editions of an original article that has been rendered acceptable for publication through a rigorous and equitable "peer review" process, as opposed to any subsequent publication in a secondary medium.

"Publishing right" is taken to mean the grant of the right by an author to Taylor & Francis to reproduce and communicate to the public the whole or any part of the Version of Scholarly Record, and to publish the same throughout the world in any format and in all languages. This includes without limitation the right to publish an article in printed form, electronic form, other data storage media, transmission over the Internet and other communication networks and in any other electronic form, and to authorize others to do the same.

Copyright is retained by the author, who grants a license to Taylor & Francis to publish the version of Scholarly Record, but who remains copyright holder and is free to post versions of the article – Author Manuscript (preprint) and Author’s Accepted Manuscript (postprint) – at any time, without embargo, with a link to the Version of Scholarly Record.

FAQs on copyright transfer